

I am very concerned, even appalled, to see that Sinclair Broadcasting is forcing its stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary mere days before the election.

This company is supposed to serve the public interest, and that means serving America as a whole, not Republican America, or George Bush's America. The documentary represents a clear case of an attempt to besmirch the name of one of the two key candidates for President in a close election. While broadcasters should be free to air this, it is not Sinclair's place to _dictate_ how public airwaves are being used politically by _forcing_ 62 stations to play it.

I am greatly concerned, and while never having written to the FCC before, feel this egregious violation of the very spirit of broadcasting rules warrants your immediate attention and condemnation. If the Sinclair group want to campaign for a candidate, let them do it elsewhere, not on _our_ (citizens') airwaves.

This is a blatant example of why the FCC's continued relaxation of media ownership and conglomeration rules are harming our great democracy and reducing the value of our freedom. I hope you share my sentiment that the FCC is here to stop

such incidents, not
to allow them to happen.
